Client Relationship Summary

June 19, 2020

Axos Clearing LLC (“Axos Clearing”) is registered with the Securities and Exchange Commission (“SEC”) as a broker-dealer. Brokerage and investment advisory services and fees differ, and it is important for you to understand the differences. Free and simple tools are available for investors to research firms and financial professionals at Investor.gov/CRS. Here, you can also find educational materials about broker-dealers, investment advisers, and investing.

Axos Clearing is a broker dealer that holds accounts for Investment Adviser firms. That means that we provide clearing and brokerage services for investment advisers. Your primary account relationship is with the investment adviser servicing your account, therefore our services and relationship with you is limited. This Client Relationship Summary document discusses those services and relationship.

What investment services and advice can you provide me?

We clear and settle securities and other transactions on your behalf as directed by your investment adviser. We do not offer investment advice, recommendations, or hold any other discretionary authority on your account.

What fees will I pay?

We assess transactional fees in retail investor accounts. These fees can be in addition to fees charged by your investment adviser.

Generally, fees are assessed on a transactional basis such as the below common transactions:

- securities buys and sells,
- wire transfers,
- account transfers,
- stock reorganizations,
- account maintenance, or
- margin interest.

Important:

You will pay fees and costs whether you make or lose money on your investments. Fees and costs will reduce any amount of money you make on your investments over time. Please make sure you understand what fees and costs you are paying. For additional information on Axos Clearing’s fees, please contact us at clientservices@axosclearing.com.

What are your legal obligations to me when providing recommendations? How else does your firm make money and what conflicts of interest do you have?

Broker dealers and Investment Advisers are required to act in the best interest of retail investors when making recommendations. As a broker dealer, we do not provide recommendations to retail investors, creating no known conflicts of interest with retail investor accounts that we service.

As a broker dealer, the way we make money differs from the way investment advisers make money.

Here are some examples of ways we make money as a broker dealer:

- We make money on transactional fees associated with securities and other transactions as described earlier. These fees are paid by investment advisers.
- We may receive payment for services provided to our investment advisers.
- We may receive other cash or non-cash compensation from third parties for certain transactions, such as order routing with market centers.
- We collect sweep fees and margin interest.

How do your financial professionals make money?

As a broker dealer, we do not employ registered representatives or investment advisers that maintain direct relationships with retail investors and therefore do not make money for recommendations in retail investor accounts. Our financial professionals include registered and non-registered representative employees that perform the functions necessary to clear and settle transactions for our investment advisers. Our financial professionals receive salaried, hourly, or other structured compensation that is not affected by the transactions in retail investor accounts such as yours.

Do you or your financial professionals have legal or disciplinary history?
